

THE ACQUITTAL OF DUKES.

The acquittal of Dukes, a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, for the murder of Capt. A. C. Nutt at Uniontown, Pa., has filled the civilized world with horror. The quarrel originated from a desire on the part of Dukes to break his marriage engagement with Nutt's daughter. He took a most extraordinary course to accomplish this object. Instead of allowing the preparations to proceed, and then failing to put in an appearance at the supreme moment, as many commonplace gentlemen have done with perfect success, he must explain to the father his reason. The one that he assigned was nothing less than that he had accomplished the daughter's ruin, and to this he added that she had become the "toy of the town." Nutt did not take the usual and the only commendable course with such a beast. Instead of walking up behind him and shooting him down like a wolf, he wrote a letter in which he notified the scoundrel that he deserved death, and then permitted himself to be drawn into an interview with him. The meeting between the two was private, but Nutt had a friend within hearing, who, when he heard a scuffle in progress, entered. He saw the two men standing on opposite sides of the room, Nutt leaning against the mantel, unarmed and showing signs of exhaustion, while Dukes drew a pistol, and shouting "You came here to whip me, and I will kill you," fired and shot him dead. For this crime he was put upon trial, the indictment being for murder. The facts were proved as we have stated them, and the correspondence produced. A thrill of horror and disgust ran through the court room as the hideous misdeed of the prisoner was read, and fathers of daughters, including the Judge, turned their faces and wept for the father who had died for the honor of his child. The Judge charged the jury to convict the prisoner. But they did not do it. To the astonishment of every person in the court-room, including the prisoner himself, they returned in a few moments with a verdict of acquittal. So contrary was this to the law and the evidence that the Judge told them so, and then reluctantly discharged the criminal.

In looking after a motive for this extraordinary action, we ascertain that the jury was packed with political friends of the prisoner. Every one of them was a member of the party that elected him to office, while Nutt was an influential politician on the other side. It seems incredible that fathers of daughters could allow their political feelings to carry them to such lengths in a case like this, but it should be remembered that Fayette county where the murder and the trial took place is on the borders of another civilization, touching upon the State of Virginia where murder was for years recognized as a justifiable means of political warfare. And yet the form and the expression that popular indignation has taken makes it clear that there are not twelve other men in the county who would have rendered a similar verdict. Dukes has become a refugee, the jurors fear to walk the streets, and one of them who carelessly exposed himself was so terribly beaten that for a time his life was in danger. We have never before read of a case in which lynch law had even the appearance of justification, but it is evident from the tone of the press throughout the country that there has been some expectation of a short shrift and a long rope for Dukes, and some misgiving lest there would not be. In a great many States boasting as high a civilization as Pennsylvania, the mob would have taken up and performed the duty that the court failed to do because of a faithless and perjured jury.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The April number is already out filled with delightful reading and elegant embellishments. The chromo presented with it, "A Basket of Flowers," is a gem. "The Architectural Progress of New York City," the opening article, has twelve illustrations of prominent new public and private buildings. "The Descent of the British Crown," by A. H. Guernsey; "Edinburgh," by Noel Rathven; "Leon Gambetta," "Ancient Laborers, and Princes of Grand Chimney and New Granada," etc., etc., are exceedingly interesting and profusely illustrated. The serial, "The Beautiful Countess of Clairville," is continued and there are admirable short stories, sketches, adventures, etc., by popular writers. Geo. Meredith, Geo. Weatherly, etc., contribute some excellent poems, and the miscellaneous articles, paragraphs, etc., abound with entertainment and information. There are 128 pages quarto, and over 100 embellishments in each number of this favorite magazine; the price of a single copy is 25 cents only, $3 a year, postpaid. Address, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

[Ogden Pilot.] The Democratic campaign cry of 1876 was "Reform." It was a strange cry to issue from such an organization as the Democratic party and gave rise to a strong suspicion that those who made it were insincere, and their object was to get possession of the reins of government, not so much for reforming the civil service, as to provide fat places for their party friends by turning out the adherents of the party in power. Everybody knows that it is one of the cardinal principles of the Democratic party that "to the victors belong the spoils" of office, and no one believes that any good Democrat would prove so recreant to the traditions and custom of that party as to advocate the retention of Republicans in office, to the exclusion of Democrats. And so the Democrat party has remained out in the cold and up to the present time the Government has continued to be administered by the same party which saved and reconstructed the Union and made true reform possible. For the passage of the Civil Service bill by the last Congress, the country is indebted to the Republican party. It was signed by a Republican President and has become a law. A few Democrats in each house voted for the measure, but their Democracy was and is seriously questioned by the Democratic press and the rank and file of the party. Questioned, we say, because their action was such a radical departure from the time-honored customs of the party; for under the new law no opportunity is offered to supplant a faithful Republican officeholder by an untried hungry Democrat, or by a hungry Republican, either, except for cause.

To the Republican party, through its President and its representatives in the Senate and House, the country is indebted for the civil service reform measure which is now on the statute books. To them alone belongs the credit. In England and some other countries the subordinate officers hold certain offices for life, or during their good behavior. Such is also the case in this country in some instances, but rotation in office is the rule here and a large majority of office-holders are commissioned for a definite term of brief duration. Until after the passage of the Civil Service bill, Federal officers very naturally felt the insecurity of their position, which were held in many instances through the favor of a Senator or Representative in Congress, as a reward for the performance of political work, rather than because of their fitness for the position or their efficiency in administering the duties of the office. A change in the political fortunes of the Senator or Representative was too apt to cause a change in the officeholder's position to make him feel secure in his tenure, and the consequence of such uncertainty was that office holders could not see and appreciate the necessity of giving strict attention to the details and duties of an office which they were liable to lose at any time. Hence the passage of the Civil Service bill was a relief to all such, by assuring them that so long as they should do their duty faithfully they would not be disturbed.

It is the policy of the present Republican Administration to bring the civil service up to the highest state of efficiency possible, and for this reason President Arthur has used great care and shown wise judgment in his selection of subordinate officers to fill positions which have become vacant from any cause whatever. Where removals from office have occurred, good reasons have been made without a full and fair investigation of the charges preferred against the office holder who was removed. It is the policy of the Administration, now strengthened by the Civil Service bill, that make the Federal office holder feel secure in his position and encourages him to be diligent in the performance of his duty. All this tends to purify the civil service and make it efficient. So, at last, the Democratic party has got what it pretended that it wanted in 1876—genuine civil service reform; a Republican statute, sanctioned by a Republican President, which prevents the appointment of incompetent men to official positions, or the removal of competent and efficient officials for the only reason that their places are wanted for the favorites of a Senator or Representative. Removals from office will be made in future, so says the law, only after distinct and specific charges have been made and proven, and officials who desire to hold on to their positions until the expiration of the term for which they were commissioned, will be very careful to live up to the laws and regulations governing their official conduct. The Democratic party did not "banker" after the passage of any such law or the inauguration of any such a reform while their hungry members were shivering out in the cold, but it is very satisfactory to Republicans and the Democrats will have to stand it.

TUSCARORA MINES.

A Systematic Plan of Opening the Mines. The Tuscarora Mining News says: There has been but little change in the situation under ground during the past week. Each day and each hour adds to the length of the drifts and crosscuts and brings the work of exploration, which is everywhere carried on systematically to that end, to a point where finding of more than indications is confidently expected. To any familiar with the workings it is apparent that at more than one point the work is such as is designed to put the various levels in shape to show up ore and at the same time be prepared to work it advantageously. The 500 and 600 levels of the Grand Prize is now almost drained of their surplus water, and the pump is called upon to handle but the natural flow. This will considerably lessen expense and greatly facilitate work, as the shaft can be more constantly used. In the Argenta connection will be made Monday by winze from the 600 level with the east drift on the 700 level thereby affording good ventilation, which is quite important, the air having been bad on the lower levels recently. Concerning the Navajo the news is the same as heretofore—cheering to stockholders. The stopes are yielding their usual amounts; the mill is running smoothly and gives average battery assays of the ore milled the past week at $234 72. The bullion shipments of that company for March have been made regularly each week, and the four shipments aggregate $68,882 81. The work in Independence, Belle Isle and North Belle Isle has been prosecuted as usual and good progress made. The Elko Con. shows some fine chloride ore of a high grade in drift No. 3.

Arabian Millet.

This grass, which the agricultural papers never tire of praising, is to have a fair trial in Humboldt county this year. The Silver State says: "Many farmers in Paradise Valley and on Big Meadows have purchased from ten to fifty pounds of the seed for the purpose of thoroughly testing it. If it will stand the dry and cold seasons of this country and produce half as much hay as is claimed for it, it will doubtless be grown extensively next year in Humboldt. While alfalfa is raised by many farmers on Big Meadows, very little of it is raised in Paradise Valley, farmers claiming that it does not do well there, but if the millet proves to be as prolific and nutritious as is claimed for it, it will supplant alfalfa everywhere."

The Live Yankee.

Nick Frayer has made arrangements with the Bullion Company to have a lot of ore from the Live Yankee mine worked at the Bullion mill. He tells the Winnemucca Silver State there is an unlimited quantity of ore in sight in the Live Yankee mine. The vein is eight feet wide, and the greater part of it free ore that will average $80 a ton. He could supply a mill right along from the mine, but the Bullion Company has an eight foot vein of solid ore, and it agrees to run a five-stamp battery on his ore simply to accommodate him.

The Tariff on Wool.

The tariff on wool, as provided by the bill which passed at the close of the Forty-seventh Congress, is ten per cent. on all wool, (carpet wool excepted) the price of which at the last port of shipment is thirty cents or less, and twelve cents per pound on all wool which costs more than thirty cents per pound at such port. This ought to enable our sheep owners to compete with foreign wool growers as it gives them an advantage of ten per cent. on inferior grades, and virtually prohibits the importation of high grades.

"YOUNG MRS. WINTHROP".

At Nevada Theater Last Night.—The Amusement Event of the Season.

John Piper was made happy last night by seeing the Nevada Theater crowded, the audience being one of the largest and most fashionable ever congregated together. The play, "Young Mrs. Winthrop," delighted everybody, and its artistic rendering by the talented Madison Square Company was the theme of general admiration. The story is a simple one, simply told, but never better told than by the Virginia Chronicle as follows: It is the recital of a marital estrangement and subsequent reunion. Husband and wife are slowly drifting apart. Gradually their lives have insensibly widened. The fault is his, but he is unconscious of it. He is indifferent to his wife's longing for his company. He is rich; he has a beautiful and comfortable home. Everything is luxurious; there are no anxieties, no worries. She should be happy, thinks he. He has business schemes, in which she cannot possibly be interested—it is out of her world. He goes his way, giving no thought to the little woman at home, who, though surrounded by wealth yearns for a tender word, for a tender caress from him. She gives up hope finally tries to accommodate herself to her conditions. She seeks for consolation and attention elsewhere, and finds in the gayeties and frivolities of society a temporary relief. He begins to notice her coldness and reserve. He ascribes her apathy to waning love, as she has already done in his case. The little life that might have still kept them together flickers out like a spark, and desolation adds its darkness. He resolved on a separation, which will give them both the freedom they each seem to wish for. She mechanically assents.

The old family lawyer is called in to arrange matters in proper shape. He sees that their love is but sleeping, and determines to bring them together again. He reads the documents of separation and division of property. A reference to the date of their marriage recalls incidents connected with the ceremony. He stops to relate them; his listeners are interested, draw near, and, with bated breath, and beating hearts, drink in his words. They correct him in minor details—misstatements that are purposely made by the sly old lawyer—refer to one another; think and talk of the past, until their memory brings them to the present, and they stop and move away. Again and again the old lawyer touches their heart strings. Each time the same thing occurs, but the recoil lessens. The ice is melting, the springs of tenderness are swelling up, ready to flow. Something more is needed. The little grave is mentioned, its silent and beloved occupant stretches its spirit arms to them, and through the child they go to each other for ever. This is a delicate domestic story touched with genuine sentiment and honest pathos, and moves the kindest and best sensibilities. It is well told, well balanced, and the development is gradual and powerful. It is elevated in thought and beautiful in expression. There is absolutely no strain after dramatic effect, yet the tenderest emotions of the heart are touched, and the noblest impulses of the mind aroused. Bronson Howard has made no effort to electrify the audience; naturalness has been the chief aim in view. It is a simple appeal to the gentlest and most sacred feelings that find a place in our hearts—an appeal to the true and tender emotions of our souls.

The part of Mrs. Winthrop was portrayed by Miss Carrie Turner. This young lady has a very handsome face full of expression, and possesses a little willowy form and her costumes were elegant. Of her acting too much cannot be said. She is without doubt the cleverest emotional actress who has ever visited Reno. Her style strongly reminds us of Clara Morris. She is very natural and graceful, and seems to be entirely unconscious of the presence of her audience, so wrapped up does she seem to be in her art. The JOURNAL predicts for the young lady a bright and brilliant future. She was ably seconded by Mr. E. J. Buckley. His performance of the husband, was quite dignified and manly, and in his pathetic scenes he displayed an emotion that brought his audience to tears. Miss Sidney Cowell who is favorably known by the habitués of the theater in this part of the country, played the difficult part of Mrs. Dick in such fine style that the audience became hers at once. The rest of the characters were taken by Mr. Whiffen, Mrs. Whiffen, Miss Leslie, Mrs. Rose and Mrs. Rich.

Sydney Smith being ill, his physician advised him to "take a walk upon an empty stomach." "Upon whose?" asked Sydney. Still better steps to take would be the purchase of Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are especially valuable to those who are obliged to lead sedentary lives, or are afflicted with any chronic disease of the stomach or bowels. ## THE PANAMA CANAL.

Speeding the Work.—What has Been Done.—Supplies Furnished by the United States.

According to officers of the Panama Canal Company, work on the canal is going on satisfactorily. There are now about six thousand men at work. More than half the line is under contract, and the canal company is also at work on the other parts. One of the contracts embraces about seven miles on the Atlantic side, and another about the same on the Pacific; both with American companies. A number of miles of side track have been built connecting with the Panama railroad leading out to the places selected for the deposit of excavated rock, earth, etc.; others are building the new harbor about three miles from Aspinwall, and it is nearly completed. The dense undergrowth has been removed from sea to sea as a necessary preliminary to the borings and location of the line. Houses have been built all along the line for employees. A large quantity of materials and machinery, including locomotives, cars, lumber, frame houses, etc., have been sent from the United States. Something is sent by every steamer from New York to Aspinwall. The health of the workmen is better than one year ago. The country in the interior, away from the coast, has been found to be comparatively healthy. The waters from the Chagres river will be kept from flooding the canal by a dam in the neighborhood of Gamboa. This dam will be constructed in one of the gorges of the mountains. Such American machinery as has been sent to the Isthmus has given great satisfaction. Besides machinery many supplies have been and will be sent from this country or are already in purchase. Of the Panama railroad stock and for other purposes there have been nearly $25,000,000 in gold paid by the canal company to the citizens of the United States. Charles De Lesseps will be in New York next week. Engineers have estimated that the whole forty-six miles of the canal will be finished in about seven years, unless something now unforeseen occurs.

A Railroad Does a Popular Thing.

It is not often that a railroad company in California does anything which adds to its popularity, but the people of the lower portion of the State are much pleased with the Southern Pacific Company for the facilities it has given them to open markets for their products. By a recent schedule made green fruit is now taken from Los Angeles to Galveston and Kansas City for $1 80 per 100 by freight train, to St. Louis and New Orleans, $1 92; to Chicago, $2; to New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, $3 27. Vegetables are taken at $1 40, $1 42 and $1 50 to the same places, respectively. Oranges and lemons, $1 50, $1 67½ and $1 75 to the same places, in the above order. This gives the Los Angeles Herald the occasion to remark:

The Southern Pacific Railway, with a liberality which does it honor, has published a schedule of freights on green fruits and vegetables, from Los Angeles to the east, which offers unusual opportunities to our people. They can ship their early specialties to the east at prices which simply guarantees them a monopoly of the eastern markets, not only in the early Spring but all through the Winter. For thirty years past the Southern Pacific Railway has responded to every demand of the people of Los Angeles county. In the present instance, they have simply anticipated and exceeded our demands, and have offered to the truck garden interest of Los Angeles county by a special rate, transportation figures which will put us in a condition to distance both the Bermudas, the West Indies and Norfolk, and other early maturing points of the Southern States.

The mountains west of Reno are again covered with snow. A glance at Peavine is sufficient evidence that the late storm was a stormy one.

THE RAJAH'S BEDSTEAD.—There is on view in Paris at the present time a bed of rare and singular construction, which has been made to the order of an Indian prince, and is about to be sent out to him. The bedstead, which is of satinwood, with large plates of silver repousse work, is very beautifully carved, and has cost upward of $12,000. The most original part of this bed is the mattress, which has been fitted up as a music box, so that directly any one lies down it plays tunes selected from Gounod's operas.

At the four corners of the bed are four statues, representing young girls of Greek, Spanish, Italian and French nationality, their only ornament being a gold snake bracelet twisted round the wrist, which holds the fan they are waving over the sleeper. By an ingenious contrivance of the artist employed to cast these statues, the eyes have been made to move, and the realistic appearance of these young ladies is heightened by the addition of four wigs in four shades of color, supposed to be typical of each nation.—St. James's Gazette.
